George Proudfoot has been a Director/Trustee of Adam Smith Global Foundation since its inception in 2012, specialising in the history of Kirkcaldy in Smith's time and well as the development of the heritage centre & volunteering.

He was employed in the further education sector for over 20 years as a lecturer and in the development of outreach delivery.

Subsequently he became a community development consultant, including work within adult education, the voluntary sector and European project delivery and evaluation.

He still serves on the boards and committees of a wide range of voluntary sector organisations in Fife, covering social justice and history and heritage.
